The beautiful University of Arkansas campus, Fayetteville and the Ozarks provide exciting opportunities such as concerts, plays, Razorback sports and outdoor activities.

Did you know?

- ◆ Agribusiness makes up the largest portion of the U.S. economy.
- ◆ The food and fiber system employs one of every five workers in America.
- ◆ Job prospects are diverse — less than 10% of agribusiness involves actual farming.
- ◆ Of all the jobs available in food and agriculture, almost half are agribusiness related.

Tory Hodges
AgriBusiness Major
Bodenhamer Fellow

"Initially, I was impressed by the closeness of the Bumpers faculty with their students, the one-on-one attention and the smaller class size. In the AgriBusiness Department, I found endless opportunities and unique ways to meet my goals. I'll study environmental issues, global economies and expanding agricultural markets. I want to make a difference. Here, I think I can."

Ewell Welch, MS,
Agricultural Economics
Arkansas Farm Bureau
Executive Vice President

"We have numerous graduates of the U of A Agricultural Economics and AgriBusiness Department on our staff and have found them very well-trained academically. They are also enhanced by the research component that is unique to the Land Grant system and not available in other programs. We have found them well prepared to meet current and future business challenges."

Nathan Reed, BSA,
Agricultural Business
U of A Law Student

“Every financial institution in Arkansas deals with agricultural and environmental issues. The combination of law and agriculture will give me a competitive edge in the job market. compared with other business programs. The AgriBusiness program promotes the importance of the individual and fosters an entrepreneurial spirit.”
